LG TO HOST STAR-STUDDED RACE THROUGH DISHWASHER-THEMED WATER PARK IN THE MIDDLE OF NYC

Fans Everywhere Invited to Join Race Day Action via Facebook Live Stream from the LG QuadWash Water Park

NEW YORK, August 15, 2017 — The year's most highly anticipated dishwasher water park has hit the streets of New York City during the 10th Annual "Citi Summer Streets" program, courtesy of the new LG QuadWash dishwasher. The massive "LG QuadWash Water Park," which tops-out at 6,750 square feet, attracted nearly 200,000 festivalgoers during the first two Saturdays of August and LG has announced an exciting new event to take place at the water park this coming Saturday, August 19th – the "LG QuadWash Slosh" race.

An all-star cast of four celebrities will face-off as they race through multiple cycles of the LG QuadWash Water Park, including:

- Actor Adrienne C. Moore, known for her current role as "Cindy" on Netflix's Orange is the New Black.
- Writer and comedian Fortune Feimster, known for her current role as "Colette" on Hulu's The Mindy Project.
- Best-selling author and former Top Chef contestant Sam Talbot.
- Actor, comedian and vlogger JD Witherspoon.

Emceeing the race will be Emmy award-winning television news journalist AJ Calloway, host of BET's 106 & Park and Extra, as he leads the contestants through a water park maze featuring surprise obstacles around every corner.

The participants are already dishing out some warnings to their fellow racers:

"My family and friends have been talking about this LG QuadWash Water Park for weeks, so when I got the opportunity to come out and quite literally play in a giant dishwasher in the middle of New York City, I knew I had finally found my calling," laughed Adrienne C. Moore. "It's going to be a blast, and all I have to say is, watch your back Fortune."

"I absolutely love that LG created a giant dishwasher-themed water park in the middle of New York City. It's amazing," said Feimster. "It's such a fun way to announce their new LG QuadWash dishwashers, and I'm ready to get out there and win. Those four arms on the LG QuadWash dishwasher may be amazing at getting dishes clean, but they have nothing on me."

Ready, Set, Clean!

On race day, starting at 12 p.m. EDT, the "quad" of racers will take to the Citi Summer Streets dressed in costume as their fans' favorite New York City food and compete in an obstacle course packed with water jet sprays, a maze of plates and slides made out of cutlery. Fans will also be invited to participant by engaging with the livestream to disrupt the race. "Like" the stream to gum up the works with inflatable food or "Love" to soak up the fun with some sponges! The more interactions the more fun, as contestants to compete to complete the race cycle.

The actors aren't the only ones who will have a chance to participate because LG is giving fans the opportunity to play along virtually via LG and the celebrities' social channels.

A Water Park Unlike Any Other

The LG QuadWash Water Park is a first-of-its-kind installation – a giant inflatable water attraction modeled after both the exterior and interior elements of the LG QuadWash dishwasher. Located on Park Avenue between 70th and 71st Streets in Manhattan, the Water Park features obstacle courses continuously soaked by powerful jet streams and massive slides in the shape of cutlery for kids of all ages to slide down on into pools of water. Each element was precisely chosen to showcase the innovative features of the new LG QuadWash – most notably, its unique QuadWash technology that cleans dishes with the power of four arms of powerful water jets instead of the traditional two arms seen on most conventional dishwashers. The ENERGY STAR® certified LG QuadWash dishwashers are rolling out this summer at retailers nationwide with four new series, totaling 14 models in different finishes (including the new smudge-resistant black stainless steel) and styles (including both front control and top control).
